Licensing steps

STATE OF TENNESSEE

- [ ] Register for sales tax
  Register through the Tennessee Taxpayer Access Point (TNTAP). One registration covers all your rentals in the same city or county. If you take direct bookings, collect 7% plus the local rate and file by the 20th of each month. Once registered, file every month, even a $0 return.

- [ ] Get a business tax license
  Rentals under 180 days owe business tax. With $3,000 to $100,000 a year in gross receipts in a city or county you need a minimal activity license; at $100,000 or more, a standard license. Booking platforms don't handle this for you.
- [ ] Know what the platform collects
  Airbnb, VRBO, and other marketplaces collect and remit sales tax and local occupancy tax on their bookings. Keep records showing they did. For direct bookings, you pay sales tax to the state and occupancy tax to the city or county.
- [ ] Then your county and city
  Permits, zoning, and occupancy tax rates are where Tennessee towns differ most. Pick your area.

CARTER COUNTY, TENNESSEE

- [ ] Register for sales and occupancy tax
  Airbnb and VRBO collect both on their bookings. For direct bookings, file sales tax through TNTAP and occupancy tax with the county or city.
- [ ] Then your city
  Pick your area. Johnson City's Carter County part is on the Johnson City page.

CITY OF ELIZABETHTON

- [ ] Register for sales and occupancy tax
  Tax on stays here is 9.75% sales tax + 4% city occupancy tax. Airbnb and VRBO collect both on their bookings. For direct bookings, file sales tax with the state through TNTAP by the 20th of each month. The state's rate map lists a separate city rate; ask the city whether the county's rate also applies inside city limits, and whether direct-booking tax is filed with the city or the county.
- [ ] Ask about zoning
  Ask the City of Elizabethton whether zoning allows a short-term rental at your address. Check your HOA rules too.
