We couldn't find a short-term rental permit for Parsons in any source we could open, and its current code isn't online. You owe 9.5% sales tax and 9% (5% county + 4% city) occupancy tax, and need a state business tax license once gross receipts reach $3,000 a year.

> We couldn't find Parsons's current code online. The city's 4% occupancy tax has applied since May 1, 2024. Ask City Hall about zoning and any business license before you list.

Licensing steps

STATE OF TENNESSEE

- [ ] Register for sales tax
  Register through the Tennessee Taxpayer Access Point (TNTAP). One registration covers all your rentals in the same city or county. If you take direct bookings, collect 7% plus the local rate and file by the 20th of each month. Once registered, file every month, even a $0 return.
  TNTAP: https://tntap.tn.gov/
- [ ] Get a business tax license
  Rentals under 180 days owe business tax. With $3,000 to $100,000 a year in gross receipts in a city or county you need a minimal activity license; at $100,000 or more, a standard license. Booking platforms don't handle this for you.
- [ ] Know what the platform collects
  Airbnb, VRBO, and other marketplaces collect and remit sales tax and local occupancy tax on their bookings. Keep records showing they did. For direct bookings, you pay sales tax to the state and occupancy tax to the city or county.
- [ ] Then your county and city
  Permits, zoning, and occupancy tax rates are where Tennessee towns differ most. Pick your area.

DECATUR COUNTY, TENNESSEE

- [ ] Register for the county occupancy tax
  Airbnb says it collects all local occupancy taxes in Tennessee on its bookings. For direct bookings, ask the county clerk which office takes the 5% county tax.
- [ ] Then your area
  Pick your area.

CITY OF PARSONS

- [ ] Register for sales and occupancy tax
  Tax on stays here is 9.5% sales tax plus 9% (5% county + 4% city) occupancy tax. Airbnb and VRBO collect both on their bookings. For direct bookings, file sales tax with the state through TNTAP by the 20th of each month. Ask the county and the city which office collects each share on direct bookings.
- [ ] Ask about zoning
  Ask the City of Parsons whether zoning allows a short-term rental at your address. Check your HOA or lake covenants too.
